

With the proliferation of cable networks and the internet, I can see why some corporations may feel it necessary to expand their media influence. However, don't you think there ought to be atleast SOME limits on thes influences?